Analytical Plan for the Project: "Use of Love and Hate: Exercises in English"

Subject: English Projects

Project Name: "Exploring Emotions: Love and Hate in English"

Articulating Axis: Emotional Expression through Language

General Problematic Affecting My School or Family Community: The impact of emotional language in interpersonal communication and relationships among students.

Content: Vocabulary related to emotions (love and hate), expressions, and phrases; understanding the nuances of these emotions in different contexts; writing and speaking exercises.

Suggested Methodology: Interactive learning through group discussions, role-plays, creative writing, and multimedia resources.

Didactic Sequence for the Week

Day 1: Introduction to Emotions

Start:

- Begin with a brief discussion about emotions. Ask students what emotions they know and how they express them in English.

- Show a short video clip that depicts various emotional situations (e.g., love and hate).

Development:

- Introduce vocabulary related to love and hate (e.g., affection, passion, anger, resentment).

- Use a word map on the board to visually connect words and phrases associated with each emotion.

- Group Activity: Students work in pairs to create sentences using the new vocabulary.

Total Words: 710

2. When I want the text to show a table, only lines appear, but the tables are not generated. I want the tables to appear where they correspond.
